POETICS Aristotle Aristotle's Poetics aims to give an account of poetry. Aristotle does this by attempting to explain poetry through first principles, and by classifying poetry into its different genres and component parts. The centerpiece of Aristotle's work is his examination of tragedy. This occurs in Chapter 6 of "Poetics:" "Tragedy, then, is an

A second allegory, that of the tower made of ancient stone, argued that scholars had missed the literary aspects of the text in their determination to mine it for historical and philological evidence. The man in the allegory is the Beowulf poet, and the tower is the poem: A man inherited a field in which was an accumulation of old stone, part of an older hall. Of the old stone some had already ...
